IMPORTANT DEBATE

On Mr. R. Griswold's resolution for calling on the president for the evidence of title to the province of Louisiana.

(CONCLUDED.)

Mr. J. Randolph. When the gentleman first introduced this resolution I thought it rather disorderly, but as it was noticed from the chair, I did not interfere. As on this, as well as on other occasions I have seen rules adopted, of getting rid of such a motion as that which is now before the House. I cannot reconcile the gentleman's theory with his practice. He says the treaty may be properly ratified, but not properly made. (Mr. Griswold here rose to explain.) I said, continued Mr. G. 'If the Treaty was constitutionally made and ratified, we are bound to carry it into execution.' (Mr. Randolph went on)—I cannot still understand the gentleman. I grant we are bound to carry this treaty into effect, and it is the duty of this committee to enquire what provisions are necessary to be made, and whether we are to take possession by civilians, or by soldiers. The gentleman says there are dubious points, and where were there not dubious points in a business of the magnitude of Louisiana? The gentleman has discovered a new position. If there are these dubious points, does it not lie in this committee to investigate them? If a difficulty arises it may become a subject of future investigation. The gentleman, while he acknowledges a moral duty, may refuse his sanction—he might have refused his sanction to the treaty of '93—and he may refuse it now. With regard to the stipulations on the part of France, his Catholic Majesty agrees to cede six months after the ratification of the treaty on the part of the United States. By the arguments of the gentleman, we must send a Venire to Italy, to enquire whether France has performed her part of the treaty, and an issue must be made up thereon. I am glad to find no more of that hostile spirit which once prevailed in this house. By no treaty are the boundaries of Louisiana defined, and though it has often been attempted it has never been done. It will belong to Spain, hereafter to settle the boundaries with the United States, as in a similar case with Great-Britain. When we have decided whether we shall take possession of this territory or not, it will be the time for the gentleman to make these enquiries. Another ingenious gentleman, Mr. Goddard, says, that though the ipso dixit of the First Consul is now a law to Spain, yet, he asks, how long may it continue so? This was the very reason why G. Britain so long withheld from treating with the Republic of France. There is no confidence to be placed in them, they may make war again, said the British ministers. So Spain may take possession again when she is strong. This is the gentleman's argument. We may now take possession—then Spain, in her turn, takes possession from us. I do not understand such arguments. The President has sent us his message, and this is all that is at present necessary. If gentlemen can shew a dissent on the part of Spain, then it will be time enough to enter with an armed force. I hope the committee will immediately proceed to carry the treaty into effect, and I shall vote to that effect.

Dr. Mitchell here offered to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Goddard. As I had no right to demand I had no reason to expect a compliment from the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Randolph.) But although the gentleman is not willing to allow, to the remarks which I had the honor to submit to the house, when I was first upon this question, the credit of ingenuity, yet as he has seen fit to bestow no small attention to them, I trust the house will indulge me a few moments, while I reply.—The gentleman has been pleased to enquire after the hostile spirit, which actuated me and my political friends on a former occasion—when this subject was under consideration. To what does this gentleman allude? Was there ever, sir a proposition before this house to acquire Louisiana by force? Is it in the recollection of any gentleman that this country was deemed so important to the U. States, that any members of this house proposed to go to war to acquire it? Was there ever indeed a proposition to acquire it in any manner?

I answer there was not—Look at the report of the secret committee made last session and now published—Does it intimate that it would be desirable to annex the immense country of Louisiana to the United States? No, the project to do this is to me novel. But sir, I do recollect at the last Session of Congress, that I saw the rights of the United States on the banks of the Mississippi, invaded; her honour insulted; a most solemn treaty infringed. The deliberate wrongs and insults which were offered to the U. States, I then and trust I shall always be ready to redress, whether they arise upon the banks of the Mississippi, or in any other quarter of the union: judging from the little information which was then afforded us, I should have been willing to this end to have taken possession of the Island of Orleans, until our rights were restored, although no proposition of that kind was before us. But, for this is a wish to involve the country in a war to be ascribed to me? And that for the purpose of acquiring territory not our own? No sir, I repeat it, no disposition to my knowledge, was ever entertained of acquiring the territory now ceded to the United States by force, as the gentleman seems to insinuate. The war-hoop has been raised and a disposition to plunge the United States into war, and acquire this country, per fas aut nefas, ascribed to us; but I did not expect to have seen countenance given to it here: I then felt and now feel the imputation to be unjust, at the same time I am ready to acknowledge the existence of a disposition to redress the wrongs of my country. But I admit the navigation of the river Mississippi to be vastly important, that great sacrifices ought to be made to secure it to the United States. And suppose I admit for argument sake, that we were disposed to go to war to secure it; what follows? A different course has been pursued. A treaty is now presented us, by which it is said Louisiana is ceded to the United States. Are we precluded from enquiring whether any title has been acquired to the ceded country? Are we not to be permitted to enquire, whether the seeds of future war are not sown by this cession? Are we sir, to pay fifteen millions of dollars for the purchase and still go to war with Spain for the possession of the country? May we not desire, gentlemen, to give us, war peace? If the country must be had, let us either acquire it by force, or if we purchase it, let us have the peaceable possession. We request documents, if any there are, which will prove to us that France, of whom we have purchased, had any title. The treaty does not shew this, but the reverse. A gentleman from Virginia, (Mr. Randolph) has said, that France has declared to us in the treaty that she has an incontestible title to the domain and possession of the ceded country. That it is the business of France to see to it, that we have the quiet and peaceable possession, and that this ought to satisfy us. Had the treaty left the matter in a simple declaration on the part of France, that her title to the ceded territory was incontestible, it would have been a very different thing; but she is careful to explain this declaration, and state to us clearly, what that title is, and sir, let any person read the third article of the treaty of Oct. 3, 1800, between France and Spain, and they will see, that no title is thereby acquired by France. It is true, that his Catholic Majesty promises to cede the country to France. But when? Six months after the full and entire execution of certain conditions and stipulations relative to the duke of Parma. And France cedes her right acquired in virtue of that article, to the United States, which is in other words, her right to the king of Spain's conditional promise.—To know whether this promise is binding in Spain, we ask to be informed, what is this treaty? And what are these conditions and stipulations? Has France ever performed them? Is Spain satisfied on this subject, and has Spain made the promised cession? If not, has she waived their performance? In either case France may have acquired a good title.—But if they have not been fulfilled, or waived she had none. If none, none could be conveyed to us, and the consequence is that we buy a conditional promise made by Spain to France, to cede the territory in question and the conditions not fulfilled.—But it has been answered that we do not pay our money until we get possession. I admit it, but suppose as I have before said, that Spain yielding to imperious circumstances, does not at present resist our taking possession, is it of no importance to us to see to it, that right and title are on our side? When the politics of Europe shall assume a different aspect, Spain may reassert her right, and say to us, this was mere usurpation on the part of France. We never did cede this country to her; a promise to be sure was made to cede on certain conditions; those conditions were never fulfilled; you bought with your eyes open; your title is unsound, and you knew it at the time of the purchase; restore to us a country, of which we have been unjustly deprived; ought we not to see to it, that Spain have no such claim upon us, before we purchase? And should we not, in case of a future contest with Spain on this subject, proceed with much more confidence, if we know that the title, as well as the possession is in us? But suppose Spain should wrest it from us, and application should be made to France for indemnity. Would not she also say, you bought with full notice of what our title was. Look at your treaty—it says we had only a conditional promise from Spain to cede to us; such title as we had, in virtue of that promise, we gave to you and you paid us for nothing more, settle that matter with Spain; such would be the language of France. Suppose, or, we had purchased the Island of Malta of Great Britain; she told us that her title was derived from the treaty of Amiens, and she called it an incontestible title, and offered to deliver to us the possession; should we be satisfied with this, or should we not call for that treaty, and see what were its conditions and stipulations? I trust we should;

and what difference is there between the two cases? In this case therefore, I contend it highly proper that we should see the document if any there are, which prove that France has any title to the ceded territory; gentlemen have taken various methods to get rid of this claim; one gentleman refers us to newspaper information; the learned gentleman from New York has referred us to what is well known throughout all Europe; suppose with all due humility we acknowledge our ignorance of what is so well known in Europe; what follows? Why that we have more need of the information we now seek to enable us to form correct opinions on the subject before us; this gentleman and his friends from Virginia, have also undertaken to tell us about this treaty which we wish to see, and should have regretted that the word boundaries had been made use of had it not given the two learned gentlemen an opportunity to display their information on this subject; although I must confess it is but a small base on which to rest so large a superstructure, as they have erected; but although this information may be very useful, yet as the representatives of a free people, we ought to be satisfied with nothing short of information that is official. Indeed gentlemen who are more favoured than we, have had access to these documents, if a majority of this house have information enough to guide them ought they not be willing to give to a minority such information as may enable them also to form correct opinions? But sir, it is said, that this claim for information, militates against the principles avowed on a former occasion, by those for whose political opinions, I have the highest respect; I should be very unwilling to impugn the doctrine then advanced; but even if it should let me say to gentlemen who now resist the claim, that if the doctrine that this house had a right to documents to judge of a treaty, before they vote to carry it into effect was then correct, it is now correct, and that case forms a precedent. But our claim now is not at variance with the doctrine then held. The President has sent us this treaty by Message, in which we are called upon to take the necessary measures for taking possession of, and preserving order and tranquility, in the ceded country.

Before we do this, we wish to know whether it is in truth ours—Spain is in possession—it did belong to her—we ask whether she consents to our exercising jurisdiction over it; if she does one course may be proper, if not and we mean to have the possession and to exercise jurisdiction, a very different course will become necessary; I will suppose, sir, that this Treaty had stipulated that Spain should continue in possession of Louisiana for ten years and in the mean time, every other stipulation of the treaty had been fulfilled, at the end of that time, the President calls on us to make laws to take possession of, and govern the country. We then enquire, does Spain consent, or does she refuse to give up the possession? Is not such enquiry proper and necessary, and may it not be made without trenching on the Treaty making power, which belongs to the President and Senate? I conceive it may. But the gentleman from Maryland, Mr. Nicholson, has said that it is only a question about a little time which may be spent in enacting the necessary laws, and if we never get possession, it can do no hurt; but I conceive we should make a ridiculous figure in enacting laws for a foreign country and in governing people who have no connection with us. As to the specific motion of the gentleman from New York, (Mr. Mitchell) to postpone the further consideration of this question until May next, it is singular indeed. We call for information which we deem necessary to enable us to act with understanding on this subject; the gentleman is good enough to say to us, act first and then you shall have the information; a singular favor this; I trust this motion will not prevail, but that the original resolution offered by my colleague will be agreed to.

NEW YORK, November 2.

This morning arrived the ship Betsey, M'Donogh, in 50 days from Teneriffe, and the schooner Mohawk, Clap, in 31 days from Trinidad.

Captain Clap informs that he left there, the ship Chance, Monteith, of Philadelphia, which vessel was seized the 5th September, and was still under adjudication. The cause of seizure was this—it seems the captain had neglected to enter two boxes, which were afterwards discovered by the custom house officers, and the necessary complaints lodged.

Benjamin Brower, the clerk who lately robbed the Manhattan Bank of 10,000 dollars and absconded, has been apprehended at Boston, and 7500 dollars of the money recovered. His apprehension was owing to the attention of James Lloyd Jun, Esq. of that place. The crime which this unhappy man committed has not we believe been understood out of doors. To conceal the embezzlement, he falsified the Cash Book, so as to make the addition thereof correspond with the list of the money he paid over as the whole sum he had received; which we are informed will amount to a forgery.

NORFOLK, November 2.

Arrived the brig Maryland, capt. Petrie, 12 days from Havre de Grace, burr stones and plaster of Paris. Sailed in company with the brig Peggy, capt. Reily, from Norfolk. Was boarded by several English frigates off Havre.

States or Spain; if there should, we hope Gouverneur Morris will be made our commander in chief.—His example will be of the utmost advantage, as it is certain he will never take to his heels."

[AURORA.]

A person reading the above paragraph in the Aurora, observed that the writer must be an ill-natured rascal, thus to play on the misfortunes of his fellow citizens; but, says he, in a moment, "If ever Mr. Morris wants heels, to turn from an enemy, he will apply for those of the Hero of Carter's Mountain."

[PHIL. TRUE AMER.]

An express, we understand has been dispatched by government with orders to the officers of the United States on the Mississippi to take possession of Louisiana, &c. we also learn that Mr. Pichon, the French charge de affaires, has conveyed the necessary authorities of his government, with the official order of the Spanish king under his own sign manual, for the surrender of Louisiana according to treaties. The occupation of New Orleans and the investiture of our officers, will it is presumed be the first steps: Proclamations will then be issued, and the present public functionaries, who choose to remain, will take the oaths in the name of the people of the United States.

(Aurora.)

Extract of a letter, dated Gibraltar, Sept. 1.

"No material incident happened on our voyage nor here until to day, worth recital. Capt. Bainbridge touched here on his way to join the Squadron, 3 days ago, and this morning to the surprise of the inhabitants came in with a Moorish ship and an American brig her prize, which she had captured off Malaga. Capt. B. fortunately fell in with her off Cape de Gat. This at once discovers to the Americans that the Emperor of Morocco is about putting his previous hostile and malevolent threats now into execution against the United States.—Commodore Morris is expected here hourly with the squadron and some Tripolitan prizes. There was in the bay 3 days ago two Moorish cruisers, who affected to be looking out for Genoese, by asserting they were at war with that power.

"It is the prevailing opinion of the people here, that the United States might as well be at war with the whole powers of the Barbary States as with a petty regency. If they would send out a formidable fleet to batter their towns and destroy their cruisers which will be the only thing which will render your flag respectable, and gain a permanent peace and respect from the Savages. The Emperor of Morocco is now at Tangiers, about fifteen miles from here."

Extract of a letter from Halifax, dated, October 17, to a gentleman in Boston.

"The Prince Adolphus Packet, arrived yesterday with the mails from Falmouth, in 25 days, passage, and brought London Papers to the 17th ult. Their contents are not very interesting.

"Spain endeavors to avoid a war with Great Britain; and a wish to preserve Portugal from the consequences of a French visit prevents the British Ministers from taking that step with regard to Spain, which the people of Great Britain seem to demand, particularly the naval class.

"It is said the Northern Powers, of Europe, must come forward and support the neutrality of the Sound and the Baltic, but they appear very tardy. Notwithstanding the French are said to have garrisoned Lubec, it appears, from the Marine List, that a greater number of vessels continue to enter from and clear out for that place and the ports of the Baltic, as if no obstruction existed or was expected.

"An expedition has really sailed from Portsmouth, consisting of about 5000 men, commanded by General Moore among which is the 4th regiment formerly in this garrison. The naval arrangements are committed to Sir S. Smith.

"From the immense preparations Bonaparte is making for the invasion of England, it is now thought they will not be completed, so that the enterprise can be undertaken this year. A state of suspense is injurious to Great Britain—the result of an attempt to invade would undoubtedly be glorious to her.

"It seems beyond a doubt, that General Lasnes had thrown the Cabinet of Lisbon into considerable confusion, in consequence of some new demands made on the part of the First Consul; that these demands had not, so late as the 20th ult. been complied with; and that the French Ambassador was preparing for his departure, which was understood to be fixed for the 22d. It is not mentioned whether the demands of Lasnes related to the contribution in specie, or to the admission of French privateers with their captures into the ports of Portugal. Two French privateers had in the beginning of last month, anchored in the Tagus with three small English prizes but were immediately ordered to Sea by the Government.

"A rumour was in circulation at Lisbon, that the troops in Madrid, without any orders from the government, had seized on the person of the Prince of Peace, and that this extraordinary step was generally considered as the forerunner of serious disturbance in Spain."

The Pylade arrived at Portsmouth, (Eng.) the 2d September from the coast of Africa, has brought intelligence of the loss of the ship St. Juan, under Spanish colours but supposed of English property. She was cut off by the slaves, who murdered all her people except one sailor and a boy, and run the ship on shore, near the Rigo Ponges, where she was wrecked.

To Mariners.—A beacon has lately been erected on the Ball Rock, near Liverpool; it is very strong of its kind, and conspicuous enough to be seen at the distance of 10 miles in clear weather; experience must yet shew whether it will stand the winter storms—it having been believed that no erection could be made to stand on the above named dangerous ridge; all the present inventor undertook it; he has also invented a new kind of Light house.

From a London Paper.

Extract of a letter from Paris, August 20.

"There prevails in this government a secret agitation, of which it is difficult to unfold the cause, and expressions of discontent escape from the lips of men who have hitherto been the most strenuous flatterers of Bonaparte, and who used to applaud his extravagances as so many traits of genius, and his silly answers as ingenious repartees. The journey to Brussels has disgusted many. Bonaparte treated his ministers most cavalierly in the presence of the Belgians; who were astonished that a man who dealt in such a manner with his agents should be so faithfully served. Le Brun wrote a confidential letter to Cambaceres, of which the latter divulged a part, and which Bonaparte wished to see. Cambaceres refused to commit his colleague.—The Corsican was furious. "I see (said he) that many things are concealed from me, and that there has been much caballing with the senate in my absence; but were my life to be a sacrifice, I shall know how to govern with firmness." Portalis has been the negotiator on this occasion, and it is thought he will succeed. Chaptal, the minister of the Interior, has sent in his resignation from Aix-la-Chapelle. The answer transmitted through Duroc was—"that the existing government dismissed its ministers, but could not accept of their resignations; that his services were necessary, and that therefore it would be imprudent in him, to refuse them." The result of this correspondence is not known.

To enable the President of the United States to take possession of the territories ceded by France to the United States by the treaty concluded at Paris, on the thirtieth of August last, and for the temporary government thereof.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress Assembled, That the President of the United States, be, and is hereby authorised to take possession and occupy the territory ceded by France to the United States, by the Treaty concluded at Paris on the thirtieth day of April last, between the two nations; and that he may for that purpose, and in order to maintain in the said territories the authority of the United States, employ any part of the army and navy of the U. S. and of the force authorised by an act passed the third day of March last, entitled "an act directing a detachment from the militia of the United States, and for erecting certain arsenals," which he may deem necessary, and so much of the sum appropriated by the said act as may be necessary is hereby appropriated for the purpose of carrying this act into effect; to be applied under the direction of the President of the United States.

THE DEFENCE OF SCOTLAND.

A NEW BALLAD.
Auld Robin he came frae the town,
An' a frightened man was he,
"Fling by your wheels, ye wives," he cried,
"And lasses ye maun flee!"

"For a' the French are coming ow'r,
As fast as they can bang,
To spoil our lands and seize our gear,
An' young and old to hang."

"They've sworn to do it, and Bonaparte Says Scotland he shall hae,
And those that winna yield to him,
He'll burn, or else he'll slay."

"Ogh! an' alas! the days are gane
When Bruce and Wallace fought,
An' the fair freedom o' this land
Wi' manly vigour sought."

"In their rude times nae tyrant dar'd
To shew his hated face;
But is there only spirit now,
To save us frae disgrace."

The words nae sooner out were spoke,
Than twenty tongues cried shame!
An' first young Tain stood forth in haste,
The heartless earl to blame.

"Wha says that Scotland's spirit gane?
Wha says her sons are snails?
Wha says they'll tamely bow the neck
To Bonaparte's tools?"

"Let Frenchmen loot to that disgrace,
But we sic meanness scorn:
We'll shew the world that men o' might
Are still in Scotland born."

"The hearts that beat within our breasts
Know neither guilt nor fear,
An' these are arms, think ye ou'r weak,
To wield the massy spear?"

"We'll shaw the world that not wi' Bruce Did Scotland's valour end,
An' that we've strength an' courage yet
Our country to defend."

"Then haste, my comrades bold, prepare
The haughty foe to meet;
An' let the slaves of France behold
Their tyrant at our feet!"

Ten Dollars Reward.
ABSCONDED on Sunday morning, the 30th ult. from the Printing Office of the Apollo, an apprentice boy, about 16 years old, but rather small of his age: his eyes are dark, and his hair of a pale and fallow appearance—his mouth wide and his nose small. I do hereby forewarn all printers and other persons from harboring, employing, or giving him any kind of support, or they will be subjected to the penalty which the law directs. He has taken with him a Gold French Watch, the case of which is set around with pearl, near the edge of the glass; two of the pearls have fallen out—makers' names (Argand and Solomon) marked on the face. This apprentice's name is JOHN ROSS, but being an artful boy, it is likely he will assume some other. Whoever apprehends and secures said boy, so that I get him again, shall receive the above reward, and all reasonable charges paid.

PRIVATE applications having proved fruitless, I now call publicly on William Triplett, (the inspector of tobacco at Collector's) to pay me seventeen dollars and thirty cents, which he has long ago received for a hoghead of tobacco he sold and applied to his own use, and has promised four several times to pay, asserting each time that he had money either at home, at the Oceanuan Mills, or in Alexandria. But all his imaginary funds have failed, and all his promises are broken.
When Peter Coulter was presented with the tobacco note, he immediately paid one half of it, and referred to his brother inspector for payment of the other moiety, who has offered no other coin but broken promises. Had he confessed the truth at first, that he was without money, and promised to pay as soon as he could, I should have believed him, and probably not said a word to him on the subject from that day to this. But his pride and self importance would not allow him to make such a confession, and when shuffling and false promises could no longer avail him, he had recourse to ill manners and insult.
If payment is not very shortly made, I must drag the little great man into a court of justice on his four assumptions, where his conduct will be properly exposed with costs of suit. The above-mentioned facts will be substantiated by the evidence of Wm. Hoskins, Thos. Barrott, Lee Massey, jun. and Peter Coulter.

and length of time given for greater part of the purchase money. Any person who would purchase the entire tract may have a great bargain.
Their contiguity to three flourishing towns must in a little time enhance their value greatly. The title is unquestionable, as may be seen by conveyances made to me by Ferdinand Fairfax, esq.
Information as to situation quality, &c. may be had from Colonel James Coleman, or Dr. Richard Coleman, living adjoining. I also wish to sell about 200 acres of land, about three miles from town; it may be had in lots of 25 acres; lies remarkable high, and healthy; has a sufficiency of Wood to each lot, and will suit well for Country cots for gentlemen in town to remove to in the Summer months, and be sufficiently near to do their business in town. Several lots may be so laid off as to have a full and commanding view of the City, George town and Alexandria. For further information apply to the subscriber, living adjoining the town of Alexandria.
